Accreditation at stake next month

By William B. Lucas
 Reporter

A team from the North Central Association Commission on Higher Education will visit Marshall Nov. 5-8 to decide if the university will continue to be accredited and to provide advice and assistance to maintain high academic standards.

"They will look at the structure of the whole institution," said Robert B. Hayes, Marshall's coordinator for accreditation. "It's pretty important to everybody concerned."

He said although Marshall has been accredited since 1928, it must be renewed every 10 years.

Hayes said without accreditation some students would not come to Marshall, students would have a difficult time transferring credit to other institutions, and quality faculty probably would not come here.

He said central accreditation is the first step in the whole process for getting approval for any program. Marshall has about 27 specialized accreditations and none of those would be available without this North Central Association accreditation. "Without it there wouldn't be things like the medical school," he said.

Team members are called evaluators/consultants which means

"They'll look at faculty credentials, the number of students who are graduating, the administrative structure, the faculty and student governments, the fees systems and how it works and state government and how it supports higher education."

Dr. Robert B. Hayes,

the visits are more than just an inspection. "They are not only here to evaluate us, but to consult with us. They direct us into ways for improvement," Hayes said.

Hayes said every facet of the university will be examined. "They'll look at faculty credentials, the number of students who are graduating, the administrative structure, the faculty and student governments, the fees system and how it works, and state government and how it supports higher education," he said. "They look at the equipment and facilities. Just look around campus and everything you see will be selected."

According to a report compiled by the university entitled "Self-Study Report," preparations for the visit began July 1, 1993. President Gilley appointed a steering committee to plan and prepare for re-accreditation.

"It is called a self-study process with the aim of improvement," Hayes said. He said his role is to coordinate the actions of the steering committee and to work toward compilation of the self-study report.

"I worked with them to outline the self study and to determine what we're going to do," he said.

Hayes said the faculty and staff of the university has completed a lot of work to get ready for this visit. According to the Self-Study Report, the first step in the process was a review of documents associated with the last re-accreditation visit in 1986.

Hayes said the next step required all departments and staff to conduct detailed studies of their areas of responsibility. "The reason they want you to do this in-depth study is to find what we as people within the institution define as strengths and challenges, that we might attack the challenges and improve the institution," he said.

He said there were more than 30 different committees that submitted information to the steering committee. Each one provided a list of strengths, weaknesses and recommendations for their areas.

Hayes said the accreditation team will provide a report to the president on the last day of the visit.

"This gives him some indication what it looks like. Then, within 30 days, they'll send a written report," he said.

Hayes said the team will make recommendations to the North Central Association Commission on Higher Education.

He said their report will recommend whether Marshall should be accredited with some conditions or if the university should not be accredited.

Hayes said the accreditation team will have full access to reference files that provide more complete data than is included in the Self Study Report.

He said they will interview faculty, staff and students. Hayes said in some cases, the members of the team will visit classrooms and ask both the students and professors questions.

He said the members of the team come from other institutions of higher education.

"They are experienced people who have been through this process before," Hayes said.

Marshall Bookstore plans reorganization of first floor

By Stanford E. Anglon
 Reporter

Marshall Bookstore officials are planning to reorganize the first floor to provide better and more efficient service to students, Michael Campbell, bookstore manager, said.

Reorganization will begin Monday and will last two or three days, Campbell said. The reorganization will include installation of four checkout registers, and four coin-operated lockers. The bookstore now has three checkout registers and no lockers.

The coin-operated lockers were a popular request of many students who do not like to leave books unsecured or give them to someone else to watch while they shop, Campbell said.

Kim Leslie, South Point sophomore, said she hates "leaving your bag at the door."

Use of lockers will be free for bookstore customers. They can be operated using a 25-cent coin as a token. Upon retrieving their bags, the coin will be returned.

Campbell said the bookstore will have Hallmark greeting cards which is also a popular request among students.

The upstairs section might close for a few days to complete the reorganization.

In this case, the bookstore will operate from the lower level textbook section.

The reorganization is designed to "make shopping fun and convenient," Campbell said. "I am very pleased with the progress we've made since taking over the bookstore. It took the entire staff working together as a team to get things ready for school."

The bookstore was taken over July 1 by Follett College Stores, the largest campus bookstore company in the United States and Canada.

Campbell said plans also include expanding the first floor bookstore to include the textbook section.

Three architectural firms have been interviewed and one will be chosen by the end of the week to do the expansion work, said Raymond F. Welty, director of auxiliary services.

The plan is to expand the existing bookstore on the first floor by building an additional section, Welty said. However, the specifics will not be completed until an architectural firm has been hired and has submitted its plan.

The expansion will be paid for by $725,604.97 Follett Colleges Stores presented to President J. Wade Gilley in exchange for an inventory the company required when it took over operations, Welty said.

President Gilley said Follett will contribute $100,000 toward the expansion.

The expansion should be done in less than two years.

No skipper: 'Superman' attends gala

NEW YORK (AP) Christopher Reeve, unable to move from the shoulders down after a horseback-riding accident, presented an award Monday to Robin Williams at a benefit dinner for the Creative Coalition, an actors' advocacy group.

Reeve recalled that Williams visited his hospital room five days after the May 27 accident.

"When the chips were down and my life was hanging in the balance ... there was Robin Williams, leaping to my assistance," the tuxedo-clad Reeve told about 500 celebrities in his first public appearance since the accident.

Breathing with the aid of a ventilator, the 6-foot-4 actor activates his electric wheelchair by blowing through a tube. He stayed in a separate room at the Pierre Hotel until his presentation.

Reeve, 42, joked about his misfortune, saying he decided to attend the gala after recalling the advice of a former English teacher to another student about skipping school.

"She said, 'The only excuse you could have is a quadruple amputation, and even then you could come in a basket,'" Reeve said. "So I thought I'd better show up."

Williams, who was being honored for work he has done with the Creative Coalition, received an award shaped like a theatrical spotlight.

He looked at the award, then at Reeve, and said, "Before we mount this new headlight on Chris' wheelchair ...." Interrupted by laughter, Williams then kissed Reeve's forehead.

He smiled and laughed during his brief appearance at the end of the evening, and thanked those attending the $1,000-a-plate event for their support.

Clinton has a mania for mango ice cream

SAN ANTONIO (AP) Six gallons of mango ice cream for President Clinton and make it snappy.

The president placed the special take-out order before arriving at San Antonio Tuesday to speak to workers at Kelly Air Force Base and meet with the executive committee of the initial Base Adjustment Strategy Committee.

The dessert, which has been on the menu of the Menger Hotel's Colonial Room for more than a century, is made from mangoes from the hotel garden, hotel spokesman Arthur Cavazos said.

The six gallons, which would cost the average consumer $128.98, tax included, was free.

Midshipmen charged with LSD possession

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Two midshipmen at the U.S. Naval Academy have been accused of LSD possession.

As a consequence of the academy's accusations, the entire student body of 4,000 people were obliged to submit to urine tests.

An investigation by college and Navy officials "identified a small number of midshipmen who were potentially involved in illicit drug use," Capt. Tom Jurkowsky, an academy spokesman said.

The two midshipmen, who have not been identified, were confined to the academy grounds Sunday.

Academy officials were expected to charge them with the purchase and possession of illicit drugs.

As part of the investigation, half of the student body underwent urinalysis Sunday.

The other half took the urinalysis Monday.

Jurkowsky said two other midshipmen were expelled this year for possession of illegal drugs.

Fayette man sentenced

FAYETTEVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — A Fayette County man convicted of forcing his lover to perform oral sex the night she died has been sentenced to 10 to 25 years in prison.

David Lee Welch, 30, was sentenced Monday for forcing himself on Betty Sue Chavis, 61, as she lay helpless in her bed.

Welch was convicted of second-degree sexual assault.

Ms. Chavis died Dec. 28, 1993, at her

Mount Hope apartment.

Circuit Judge Charles Vickers dismissed a first-degree murder charge against Welch at his trial in March.

Prosecutors contended that Welch spiked the woman's booze with an anti-depressant, leaving Chavis powerless to resist his advances for oral sex.

A pathologist blamed the woman's death on liquor and the anti-depressant but said there was no way to tell how the drugs entered the woman.

General Motors takes losses with a smile

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp.'s third-quarter earnings rose 16.4 percent from a year ago as it narrowed its losses in its North American production division.

A GM spokesperson said the company earned $642 million, or 42 cents a share, for the July-September quarter compared with $552 million, or 40 cents a share, a year ago.

The company's North American automotive unit lost $93 million in the quarter, but that was an improvement from its loss of $363 million in the third quarter of 1994.

"We're especially pleased with the continued improvement in our North American operations, which more than accounted for our overall year-over-year increase," GM President Jack Smith said.

Analysts had forecast a decline in earnings.

GM's revenues for the quarter were $37.5 billion compared to $34.5 billion a year ago.

Earnings for the automakers usually are weakest in the third quarter.

Their fixed costs continue while production and sales are lower because of the model changeovers, vacation shutdowns, the slow summer selling season, and price cutting as the model year winds down.

For the year's first nine months, GM reported profit of $5.1 billion, or $5.32 a share, compared with $3.3 billion or $3.41 a share in the same 1994 period. Nine-month revenues rose to $124.9 billion from $112.4 billion.

The operating loss at the company's North American operations shrank as a result of cost cutting and a stronger market.

GM had strong performances from its defense-electronics and computer services subsidiaries.

Hughes Electronics Corp. reported Monday that its profit for the July-September period was $256.1 million, 4.9 percent higher than the $244.2 million earned in the 1994 quarter.

Electronic Data Systems Corp. profit for the quarter was $246 million, an increase of 13.8 percent from a year ago, when earnings were $216 million.

Chrysler Corp. spokesperson said the company's third-quarter profits were off 46 percent from a year ago.

Alcohol awareness week gives students another choice

▼ Dry Thursday activities promote positive change and new outlook for some students.

Alcohol is a problem which affects many different age groups.

But, with the abundance of bars and clubs found in college towns, it can become a bigger problem for many young adults.

Experiencing freedom from their parents for the first time, students can fall into the drinking habit.

But, Marshall students now have some alternatives to tailgating, parties or nights out at the bar.

Student health education programs are offering several activities to encourage students to remain alcohol free.

A movie shown on the field outside the dorms and midnight baseball are among the activities planned for the event.

It's time that some organization on campus came forth and offered students an alternative to the sales and deals touted by local bars.

Often students who prefer not to drink are left with few alternatives on a late evening.

Finally, students can see there are alternatives to participating in the normal weekend nights out.

This awareness week, along with the non-alcoholic tailgating offered outside the Campus Christian Center on the weekends, is good for students.

It offers a challenge, both this week with the promotion of "sober" activities and in general.

Challenging students to stand up for themselves and take a stab at trying the alcohol-free way of life is a positive thing.

Prove people wrong and break the stigma of college students as drinkers, you just might find that you enjoy it.

Besides, in the long run, you are the one who will benefit from changing your behavior now, and what's better than improving yourself.

'Moral majority' forces bookstore to close

To the editor:

I have read in Thursday's Herald-Dispatch where the "moral majority" has forced the Milton City Council to shut down the Lion's Den, a perfectly legal adult book store.

I simply cannot stand by in silence any longer. This censorship, as practiced by the tyrants of the "bible belt" must be stopped. It is a direct threat to the freedom of speech, the freedom of the press and the freedom of religion as guaranteed by the Bill of Rights.

These actions are the norm for the single greatest purveyor of fear, ignorance, hatred and greed — the church and history will back this up.

During the crusades, the cry was hatred, "Convert the infidels or destroy them." During the Inquisition, the cry was ignorance, hence the excommunication of Galileo (knowledge being a threat to the egotistical view that the papal seat is the seat of the universe).

Pope John Paul II admonishes the faithful not to listen to opposing views, while men like Jimmy Swaggart, Jim Bakker, Billy Graham, Jesse Jackson and Pat Robertson just take the money and run.

This behavior runs rampant among those who term themselves the "moral majority."

To push this philosophy of darkness, the "moral majority" uses superstition and censorship, fear and ignorance. These are the links in the chains of religion and oppression. It is a progression, and a very dangerous one. Superstition demands censorship for if the people know the truth, they can't believe the lie. Censorship breeds ignorance, since if the people believe the lie, they won't hear the truth. This ignorance, in turn, breeds fear, because the only real fear, is the fear of the unknown. Fear becomes the avenue to control, for surely if the people fear the church as the representative of an almighty god, they must obey the church, no matter what, or face that almighty god.

And, control is the road to the ultimate goal, power. Fact is, if you can control the most basic of survival mechanisms, you can control the people themselves, and therefore their wallets. Friedrich Nietzsche said in part three of "Beyond Good and Evil." Where the religious neurosis has hitherto appeared on earth, we find it tied to three dangerous dietary prescriptions: solitude, fasting and sexual abstinence. This is nothing short of voluntary masochism. If these are the policies of their god, I must, for my conscience demands it, stand and shake my fist in defiance and contempt at that puny, sadistic, morally corrupt little being.

Without question, the prize sought by this is not-so-moral majority is a state sponsored church. In such a society, no beliefs but those of the power wielders will be tolerated.

Remember that this country is not a democracy, ruled by the will of the majority, but rather a republic, ruled by the laws protecting the right of each citizen to do as he or she damn well pleases, as long as the rights of others to do the same are not violated. This is the single underlying concept of our entire legal system. The First Amendment of the Constitution says "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press." This means no church, regardless of how moral the self-righteous leaders proclaim themselves, is to be sanctioned by the government. Not their church, nor your church, nor mine.

It also says that I have the right to purchase anything that does not violate the rights of anyone else. And finally, it says the church does not have the right to prevent me, as that violates all three quoted clauses.

I find it very frustrating that this group of blind lemmings that is screaming "censor the Lion's Den," "ban the books with which we do not agree" and "sex is an evil perversion and must not be tolerated" is the exact same group of people that screams "my child has the First Amendment right to force your child to pray to my mythical god."

This is the most hypocritical, flagrantly immoral, unconscionable use of situational ethics this country has ever seen. How is that moral? How is it even logical? Where is the reason? Obviously, there is no logic and there is no reason. It has been replaced by blind faith in some money grubbing preacher.

It's time those of us with any sort of logic and reason put an end to this outrageous purveyance of twisted thought. Citizens of Milton, tell them you won't stand for it. And, stand up against the fanatics who come to your door. They are an insidious threat to your freedom, not a minor nuisance.

Appalachian State emerges as major rival in recent years

By Michael Peck
Reporter

A new rivalry has emerged in Southern Conference football, according to Gary Richter, sports information director.

Richter said the Marshall-Furman game used to be considered the most anticipated game of the season, but in the last couple of years, the Thundering Herd's battle with the Mountaineers of Appalachian State has emerged as the big game in the Southern Conference.

Furman used to be one of the leaders in the conference. A match-up between Marshall and Furman was often one of the Herd's greatest challenges. In fact, Furman has won 15 times to Marshall's five.

However, last year Furman finished 3-8 overall and was ranked seventh place in the Southern Conference.

Appalachian State, on the other hand, has emerged as a contender for the Southern Conference championship, finishing 9-4 overall and 6-2 in the conference in 1994. The Mountaineers lost out on a share of the Southern Conference title last year when they were upset 26-23 by VMI in the last game of the season.

Last year, the Mountaineers beat Marshall 24-14 in Boone, N.C., but their loss to VMI, handed Marshall sole possession of the conference championship.

This week's Associated Press poll has the Mountaineers ranked second in division I-AA. McNeese State of Lake Charles, La., is ranked in first place and the Thundering Herd is ranked in third place.

Greg Adkins, Marshall tight end coach, said although Furman was always a big game for the fans in Huntington, in his 10 years at Marshall, the most exciting game for him is when Marshall played Appalachian State.

Adkins said Appalachian State has always been considered a key S.C. game with the players, because they have always competed at the top of the league along with Marshall.

The coaches and players are excited about this week's game as they are about any other game played this year, Adkins said.

The team began preparing for the game against Appalachian State Sunday following Saturday's win over Western Carolina, Adkins said. "We are going to prepare for this game as we have all other games this year. The players are going to be self-motivated knowing the importance of the game."

Fans also are excited about Saturday's game against the Mountaineers according to ticket sales. Joe Arnone, ticket manager, said 16,000 tickets have already been sold for the game. Depending on student turnout, which has been averaging about 2,700, he said he expects a large crowd.

BEAT THE GURU

Welcome to The Parthenon's "Beat the sports guru" contest.

The rules are pretty simple:

1. Check the box next to the team you think will win this weekend's game. Write in the score of the game listed as the tie-breaker (used only in event of a tie).
2. Cut out the contest, then attach a sheet with your name and a phone number where you can be reached. Stuff your entry into the box marked "contest entries" located in Smith Hall 311. One entry per person (If we catch you cheating, you lose).
3. If you pick the most games right and at the same time pick more right than Chris Johnson (sports editor and resident guru), you win two large pizzas.
4. Faculty and staff of The Parthenon or the School of Journalism and Mass Communications are not allowed to play.

Fox may broadcast baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball is closing in on a new, multi-network television deal that would end regional playoff telecasts and bring back the Game of the Week on Saturdays.

Patterned after the NFL's TV deal, it will involve at least two broadcast networks, almost certainly Fox and probably either CBS or ABC, as well as a cable partner for some regular-season and playoff games.

Tuesday's edition of USA Today reported that a deal already has been struck with Fox and CBS, calling for $880 million in rights fees over four years, or $110 million per year per network.

Fox said it would not comment, but CBS Sports President David Kenin said in a statement: "Contrary to a published report in USA Today, CBS has made no deal to broadcast major league baseball."

He said CBS was "pleased to have the opportunity" to talk with baseball's TV negotiator, Barry Frank, but that "as of now, no formal negotiations have begun with major league baseball or its representatives."

Two industry sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press the figures reported by USA Today fall into the $100 million-$120 million per year range that baseball is asking. Fox already broadcasts the NFL and NHL.

Internships

Internships play a vital role in higher education. The West Virginia Legislature recognizes this and offers students a challenging opportunity in West Virginia's capital city.

West Virginia college and university students are invited to participate in one of five internship programs available at the State Capitol in Charleston during the Spring 1996 Semester. With over 60 intern positions available, both graduate and undergraduate students are encouraged to apply.

Each internship provides the student a closer look at the lawmaking process. Whether researching background material for proposed legislation or writing news releases for statewide distribution, participants will gain firsthand knowledge of the path a bill must travel to become a law.

Interested students are urged to call the Legislature in Charleston at 1-800-642-8650 to receive the names of each school's contact.

Because of the diversity of the programs, credit hours and stipends vary.

The Huntington Police Department, the W.Va. State Police and U.S. Marshals are among the groups that will be at the Memorial Student Center Thursday.

FBI, Secret Service, local police join forces for Criminal Justice Career Fair

Members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the U.S. Secret Service will be on campus Thursday, but they won't be looking for criminals.

They will attend the Criminal Justice Career Fair in the W. Don Morris Room at the Memorial Student Center from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

The fair also will feature representatives from the Cabell County Sheriff's Department, the Huntington Police Department, the Charleston Police Department and the West Virginia State Police along with the U.S. Marshal's Service and the Drug Enforcement Agency, Dr. Samuel L. Dameron, chairman of the Department of Criminal Justice, said.

Recruiters from the armed forces and many volunteer groups, such as the Big Brothers and Big Sisters and Branches Domestic Violence Shelter, also will be in attendance, Dameron said.

In addition, representatives from law schools such as Wake Forest University, West Virginia University and Michigan State University will be on hand for students to receive admission and tuition information, Dameron said.

Planning for the fair began about a year ago, and about 700 invitations were mailed to agencies and schools. The planning was undertaken by the Department of Criminal Justice and members of the criminal justice fraternity, Alpha Phi Sigma, Dameron said.

Alpha Phi Sigma Vice President Chet Smith said about a dozen members were involved in planning the fair this year.

"As far as students go, it gives them an opportunity to look at different agencies in the area and talk to a person from the agency one-on-one and receive information and get references," Smith said.

Dameron said the fair is sponsored to give students information they may not be aware of when seeking a job with various agencies.

"Literally, it may mean practice in learning the dates that agencies accept applications because some of them take two years to get into an agency, and if it is going to take that long, students need to know to start early," Dameron said.

Dameron also said the fair informs students of certain class requirements they may need to be employable at a certain agency.

"For instance, if one of the requirements for a certain agency is 15 hours of accounting, yet that is not in the requirements for the major, the student will still know to take those classes if they have spoken with the agency and know that is what is expected," Dameron said.

Dameron said the contacts made at the career fair may lead to jobs, so he cautioned students to consider their appearance at the fair. "These guys may be on your interview board later," Dameron said.

He encouraged students to come dressed favorably, not formally as in a suit and tie, but without lewd and offensive T-shirts.

Dameron also cautioned students to be ready to move out of the tri-state area if they want to work for a federal agency. He cited the FBI, which gives preferential hiring status to applicants who are willing to work anywhere in the country.

Dameron said the fair only lasts two and one-half hours because of the traditional rush of students for the first two hours and a lack of students in the last hour. Smith said feedback from the organizations has been positive in the past.

"Organizations fill out a questionnaire at the end [of the fair], and they usually feel good about it, or they come up to you and say 'Good job,'" Smith said.

Smith said many of the participants coming to the fair are not Marshall students. Some students come from West Virginia State College, and some travel greater distances. In fact, Smith said he had friends from Fairmont to attend one year.

The fair is open to all majors, and Dameron encouraged students who are not criminal justice majors to attend.
